INDEX.

The New Move in Oxford.—3; Dr. Temple on 'The Education of the World,' 5; Dr. Williams's Bunsen-worship, 9; philology and common sense, 11; antiquity of the human race, 13; antediluvian history, 15; history by means of etymology, 17; Bunsen on the books of the Bible, 19; the so-called pseudo-Isaiah, 21; Dr. Williams on Daniel, 23; are the prophecies predictive? 25; Messianic passages, 27; Jesus the Christ only in spirit, 29; doctrinal heresies, 31; rationalism and inspiration, 33; Mr. Goodwin on the Mosaic cosmogony, 35; Moses did not write like a Humboldt, 37; the accord of the written and fossil registers, 39; the demiurgic days, 41; light before the sun, 43; the great day of vegetation, 45; the age of mammals, 47; Professor Powell on miracles, 49; Powell versus Pattison, 51; Professor Powell's extreme scepticism and inconsistency, 53; Professor Powell's say and unsay, 55; the true philosophy concerning miracles, 57; no antecedent presumption against miracles, 59; physical empiricism, 61; the lowest deep, 63; the possible in miracles, 65; miracle and its cause distinct questions, 67; Professor Jowett, 69; Mr. Wilson and Mr. Pattison, 79.

French Fiction—its Better Aspects.—81; realism does not secure truth, 83; French literature idealist, 85; the peculiarities of idealist fiction, 87; M. About's imitation of Voltaire, 89; 'Le Roi des Montagnes,' 91; a Greek brigand's correspondence, 93; the chivalry of Athens, 95; instances of M. About's melodramatic ingenuity, 97; Voltairism unsuited to our age, 99; trente et quarante, 101; the results of a week at Baden, 103; 'Le Roman d'un jeune Homme pauvre,' 105; sunset in Brittany, 107; difference between English and French fiction, 109.

Abortive Legislation.—111; absurd regard for antiquity, 113; Stuart parliamentary forms—to what end retained, 115; reputation of Parliament jeopardized, 117; guide for the reform of parliamentary procedure, 119; the three readings—why instituted, 121; committees of the whole House, 123; Earl Derby's remedy, 125; a field of the dead, 127; absurd remedy for food adulteration, 129; medical reform, 131; impotency of the last Bribery Bill, 133; Ecclesiastical Titles Act inoperative, 135; the Russell administration, 137; change effected by the Reform Bill, 139; what representative institutions have in store, 141.

Coventry Patmore—Faithful for Ever.—142; story of the poem, 143; modern versification, 145; old England—wise womanhood, 147; English poetry—past and present, 149.

Chinese Characteristics.—150; the standstill in civilization, and why? 151; Confucius and his writings, 153; domestic affection—government, 155; Chinese diplomatists—penal code—prisons, 157; judicial corruption—crime, 159; suicide—the language, 161; language and books, 163; language—the written and spoken, 165; education, 167; books—no publishing houses, 169; sepulture and ancestral worship, 171; marriage—condition of woman, 173; Chinese cities, 175; costume—face of the country, 177; food—traffic—pride, 179; the possible and probable future, 181.

Autobiography of Alexander Carlyle.—182; Hutcheson as professor, 183; free trade—Colonel Gardiner—Porteous riot, 185; rebellion of 1745, 187; Prestonpans, 189; John Wilkes—Mrs. Garrick—Culloden, 191; history of Home's tragedy of 'Douglas,' 193; Hume—his defenders and his habits, 195.

On the Origin of Life.—197; protozoa—their purpose, 199; opinions—antiquity, 201; Oken's views, 203; M. Pouchet's argument, 205; theory of panspermia, 207; Ehrenberg's researches, 209; spontaneous fission, 211; revival of desiccated animals, 213; inconsistencies of M. Pouchet's argument, 215; contradictory views, 217; entozoa—Ceylonese fish, 219; observed formation of animalcules, 221; theory of biology, 223; M. Pouchet's cosmogony, 225.

London in the Middle Ages.—227 ; the 'Liber Albus'—regulations respecting the Mayor, 229 ; civil processions—St. Thomas of Canterbury, 231 ; procession of 'the folk' of Essex and Middlesex, 233 ; the king of the city, and the king of the realm, 235 ; the wager of law—the trustworthy men, 237 ; inquests on accidental deaths—'personable men,' 239 ; sanitary laws—laws respecting obstructions, 241 ; the market at Westchepe—Cornhill old clothes market, 243 ; statutes of the fishmongers—ancient 'tricks in trade,' 245 ; bakers—regratresses—'justice' for short weight, 247 ; taverners, 'herbergeours or hostelers,' well looked after, 249 ; wanderers after curfew—the great bell at St. Paul's, 251 ; 'birlsters and hucksters'—foreign produce imported, 253 ; large export trade—mechanics' wages, 255 ; 'the rights of women' in the thirteenth century, 257 ; the pillory and its occupants—Cornwaille's case, 259 ; Causton's bold doings—City charters and statutes, 261.

AFFAIRS, 263.

EPILOGUE.

264—284.

LITERATURE.

Professor Kingsley's Inaugural Lecture, 265.
Campbell's Tales of the West Highlands, 267.
Lord Auckland's Journal and Correspondence, 268.
Thornbury's Life in Turkey, 268.
Home Life of English Ladies of the Seventeenth Century, 269.
Wearing the Willow, 269.
Up among the Arabs, 269.
The Horse and his Rider. By Sir F. Head, 269.
The Fables of Babrius, 269.
Crowe's History of France, 270.
Gustave Masson's French Literature, 270.
Self-made Men, 270.
Guide to Her Majesty's Civil Service, 270.
A Nation's Manhood, 270.
Turner's Polynesia, 270.
Ballantyne's Golden Dream, 270.
History of Ireland. By M. Haverty, 271.
Dictionary of Contemporary Biography, 271.
Memoir of Dr. George Wilson, 271.

ART.

Faulkener's Dædalus, 271.
Tennyson's May Queen. Illustrated, 275.
Paradise and the Peri, 275.
Shakespeare's Birthplace. By J. Wise, 275.
Legend of St. Swithin's. By J. Facet, 275.
Smith's Cartoons, 275.
Dr. Lorimer's Scottish Reformation, 275.

SCIENCE.

Gatherings of a Naturalist in Australasia, 275.
Tristram's Great Sahara, 276.
Gosse's Romance of Natural History, 277.
Wills's Eagle's Nest, 277.
Wynter's Curiosities of Civilization, 278.
Dawson's Archiai, 278.
——— Supplementary Chapter, 279.
Hartwig's Sea and its Living Wonders, 279.
Forbes's Reply to Tyndall, 279.
Brown's Musical Science, 280.

THEOLOGY.

Ellicott's Lectures on the Life of Our Lord, 280.
Boone's Sermons, 280.
Perfitt's Practical Religion, 281.
Drew's Scripture Lands, 281.
Thrupp's Study and Use of the Psalms, 281.
Ackermann's Platonic Philosophy, 282.
Etheridge's Life of Thomas Coke, 282.
Tudor's Decalogue, 282.
Kennedy's Life of Rev. J. Morison, 282.
Wylie's Tercentenary of the Scottish Reformation, 282.
Angus's Bible Handbook, 283.
The Leisure Hour and Sunday at Home, 283.
Bloomfield's Critical Annotations, 283.
Smith's Christian Theology, 283.
Ebrard's Biblical Commentary, 283.
Tholuck's Commentary, 283.
Shaw's Story of my Mission, 283.
Brown's Restoration, 283.
The Congregational Pulpit, 284.
Brown's Doctrine of the Divine Fatherhood, 284.
Pigg's Sermons, 284.

The History of the United Netherlands.—285; merits and defects of the work, 237; condition of the Netherlands, 289; of the Spanish empire, 291; of the rest of Europe, 293; attitude of England, 295; justification of Elizabeth's policy, 297; the States apply to Henry of Valois, 299; and then to Elizabeth, 301; treaty with the States—siege of Antwerp, 303; energy of Parma, 305; the fire-ships—the attack on the dyke, 307; Leicester takes the command, 309; battle of Warnsfield, 311; misgovernment of Leicester, 313; anger of the States and of Elizabeth, 315; project of invasion by Philip, 317; Elizabeth prepares for the invasion, 319; bold attitude of England—the armada sails, 321; ruin of the armada—Mr. Motley's account, 323.

Iceland and its Physical Curiosities.—325; buccaneering explorers, 327; its Lilliputian capital, 329; ravine of Almannagiâ, 331; the Geysers, 333; proceedings of the Geysers, 335; artificial Geysers, 337; mud springs, 339; sulphur magazines, 341; Mount Hecla, 343; great eruption of Skaptar Yökul, 345; mountain deluges, 347; Icelandic miseries, 349; Icelandic blessings, 351.

The Sinaitic MS. of the Greek Testament.—353; discovery of the manuscript, 355-357; expected publication of the MS., 359; readings of the Codex, 361-363; alleged high antiquity of the MS., 365; the extreme antiquity of the MS. questioned, 367; palæography as yet an uncertain science, 369; corrupt text of the Curetonian Gospels, 371; the text mutilated by Tregelles, 373.

Canada.—374; characteristics, 375; the Atlantic colonies, 377; success and difficulty, 379; municipal system, 381; roads—climate, 383; Canadian rapids, 385; British route to the Pacific, 387; present route, 389.

Dixon's Personal History of Lord Bacon.—391; Bacon's early life, 393; Bacon in the Parliament of 1592, 395; in Gray's Inn and in Parliament, 397; Bacon and the Earl of Essex, 399-401; treason of Essex in Ireland, 403; Bacon and Essex before the Commissioners, 405; Lord Macaulay's onslaught—the answer, 407; Bacon's letters to Essex, 409; the 'Declaration'—Lord Macaulay again, 411; Bacon represents the University of Cambridge, 413; case of St. John and Peacham, 415; his fall—his censors, 417.

The Impending Crisis in America.—419; Washington's will—Franklin and Jefferson, 421; production of cotton, 423; shortcomings of the Manchester men, 425; evils of slavery, 427; slavery a cause of white degeneration, 429; free-picked cotton worth more than slave-picked, 431; why a policy of aggression adopted by Southern States, 433; compromises, 435; Mr. Buchanan, 437; cotton crops of Free and Slave States, 439; American Constitution not a compact, 441.

The Historic Element in Ballads.—443; use of the political ballads, 445; early political ballads, 447; 'Lilliburlero,' 449; personal characteristics in ballads, 451; George I. and the Prince of Wales, 453; Queen Anne ballads, 455; Royalist songs, 457; the 'Rota' club, 459; alterations of original text, 461; the Jacobite ballads, 463; ballad fabrications, 465; Child's collection of English ballads, 467.

Our Commerce with China.—468; peace of Tien-Tsin, 469; fresh Russian acquisition, 471; Manchoos and Taepings, 473; tea imports and cotton exports, 475; progress of the tea trade, 477; our imports of tea, 479; English cotton and Chinese cotton, 481; Chinese native maritime trade, 483.

Theological Liberalism.—485; sceptical perversions of free inquiry, 487; immoral sympathies, 489; freedom and orthodoxy of early Nonconformists, 491; modern theological liberalism a misnomer, 493; controversial courtesies of Unitarians, 495; examples of Unitarian liberality, 497; immoralities of modern liberalism, 499; Mr. Wilson's sophistry, 501; demoralizing influence of Mr. Wilson's reasoning, 503; downward tendency of current liberalism, 505; scepticism to be expected, but not feared, 507.

State of Europe,—509; Russell's defence of Sardinia, 511; Sardinia's duplicity, to whom owing, 513; treaty of Zurich no longer binding, 515; international law as respects Italy, 517; the Prussian Minister's statement, 519; principles of international economy, 521; spoliation an unprofitable pursuit, 523; international the fruit of constitutional progress, 525; what France has gained by aggressive wars, 527; causes of outbreak — European Turkey, 529; Turkey and Italy contrasted, 531; solution of the Turkish question, 533; appeal to the French Emperor, 535.

Affairs, 536.

EPILOGUE.

537—572.

LITERATURE.

Mrs. Delany's Autobiography, 537—540.
Paul the Pope and Paul the Friar, 540—543.
Rogers's Education in Oxford, 543—545.
Mrs. Trollope's Italian Revolution, 545.
The Pilgrim, 545, 546.
Mrs. Piozzi's Autobiography, 546.
Recreations of a Country Parson, 547.
Garibaldi and other Poems, 547.
Pycroft's Men of Letters, 547.
Arminius, 548.
Life of Dr. Scoresby, 548.
Emerson's Conduct of Life, 548—551.
Valdez's Life in Western Africa, 551.
Godet's Bermuda, 552.
Minnie's Love, 552.
Ritchie's Modern Statesmen, 552.
Landreth's Modern Literature, 552.
Lockhart's Medical Missionary in China, 552.
McNicoll's Essays on English Literature, 553.
Helps's Spanish Conquest, vol. iv., 553.

ART.

British Institution, 553.
Society of Female Artists, 553.
Two Photographic Societies, 553.
King's Antique Gems, 554.
Thornbury's British Artists, 556.

SCIENCE.

The Earth we Inhabit, 557.
The Church and Science, 559.
Forbes's Natural History of the European Seas, 560.
Dickson's Unity of the Physical Sciences, 561.
Dr. Lankester on Food, 561.

THEOLOGY.

Lynch on the Atonement, 562.
Scripture Revelations, 564.
Wardlaw's Posthumous Works, 565.
Maurice's Lectures on the Apocalypse, 565.
Moore's Thoughts on Preaching, 565.
Campbell's Conquest of England, 566.
Macdonald on the Pentateuch, 566.
Strauss's Dialogues, 566.
Hagenbach's Prelections, 567.
Christlieb's 'Erigena,' 567.
Vinet's Preaching during the Seventeenth Century, 567.
Baumgarten's Discourses, 568.
Guerike's Manual, 568.
Palmer's Egyptian Chronicles, 569.
Stier's Commentary, 570.
Tholuck's Sermons, 570.
Tholuck's Prophets and their Prophecies, 570.
Cowper's Codex Alexandrinus, 570.
Poole's Genesis of the Earth and of Man, 571.
Weisse's Theology, 571.
Oppert's Assyrian Grammar, 572.

Savill & Edwards, Printers, Chandos Street, Covent Garden.